Spiritual Objectives

At the end of the cell discussion, cell members will:

1. Reflect and give thanks for God’s blessings in relation to our National Day; and
2. Be intentional in our plans and actions for discipleship, ministry and church unity.

Word [45 min]

At the occasion of Singapore’s National Day, Dr Freddy Boey asked the congregation to consider the successes of the nation of Singapore and for us to count our blessings as Singaporeans. He gave the glory to God for these and cited Genesis 12:2, Genesis 22:18 and Jeremiah 4:2, indicating God’s hand in making these come to pass. He then pointed out that Singapore is exceptional, in that though it is small, it has managed to achieve and stand out amongst the nations.

Attributing the success of the nation of Singapore in key areas to planning, Dr Freddy Boey then pointed out that the Church of Jesus Christ must also be prepared to be intentional, do of its best and get involved with the community it is in. The parallels he drew were as follows:

- a. Education – in the church context, this will be Discipleship. Just like we take education seriously. The church should take discipleship seriously and endeavor to not just talk about discipleship but to actively live it out. The church needs to move discipleship from one level to another, graduating our people to higher levels. Similar to “every child matters” for education, every disciple matters in the church, though like education where the government aspires to make different routes valid and equally important, we should encourage the same for discipleship.

Just as technology is revolutionizing education by moving the focus from teacher-centric to interactive –experimental learning with a somewhat “fiddling” and engaging approach; Similarly, the church can explore looking at varied and better ways of discipleship of our people. The “Gutenberg Bible”, which was the first mass-produced book in Europe following the invention of the printing press there, changed the world by making the Bible accessible to the common man. Modern technology can also help Christianity, and should not be viewed as evil. With the aids, Christians can learn more, faster and then go on to learn more.

- b. Healthcare – Singapore was cited as one of the top 5 nations in achieving good health outcomes for its people. This is primarily due to a focus on the “patient” outside the hospital, i.e., prevention. Similarly, in the church, ministry should be more than ministering to each other exclusively and within the church. The church must reach out to do effective work for God outside of the church. The church must minister to serve the surrounding communities and the world. In ministry, we must encourage church members to move away from a self-centred, consumerist mindset towards one that focuses on serving others.
- c. Defence and security – the parallel in the church is the defence of the Gospel. Dr Freddy Boey spoke about the clear and present danger of terrorism and how it has the potential, when an incident happens, to generate fear, anger and negative emotions, tearing at the heart of the nation’s social fabric. The approach taken in Singapore is to be intentional about integrating different and diverse communities, and to promote unity. In the church, the greatest strength is our diversity. The body of Christ is together because of our same belief in Jesus Christ, even though we may come from different and diverse backgrounds and we may have different habits and cultural preferences. Dr Freddy Boey warned against unity or harmony by elimination, i.e., excluding people who are different in order to have harmony. The challenge is for the church to know how to live in Christ in unity even in the midst of diversity so that we too can withstand the tests that acts of “terrorism” brought about by the Devil.

Dr Freddy Boey concluded that the church should apply the lessons of Singapore’s nation-building to the church and focus on winning people for Christ, which is the heart of God.

Discussion Questions

1. This National Day, consider the successes of the nation of Singapore and the blessings that we enjoy. Share with your group what you most appreciate of these blessings. [10 min]

2. Dr Freddy Boey shared that to excel in key areas of our church work, we must be like the nation of Singapore and dedicate our expenditure and resources on these areas, and to intentionally plan for the outcomes we want to achieve. Relate and reflect on how the church can better plan for the three key areas highlighted: (a) discipleship, (b) ministry, and (c) church unity. [20 min]

3. As an individual member in the Body of Christ or as a Cell Group, discuss practical ways you can do more or better in the key areas of discipleship, ministry and church unity so as to win people for Christ? [10 min]

Works [10 min]

Let's pray:

1. As a church, we will be intentional in our plans and actions for discipleship, ministry and church unity.
